

Micro-residency A Isla

Terms and conditions

In R.A.R.O. we question the role of residency and its multiple formats.

Our usual format proposes the link with other artists and itinerancy within the local scene of Buenos Aires. However, we feel that part of the creative experience is also generated when we isolate ourselves and give space to silence and reflection.

This new format that we propose with A ISLA is a short experience of 5 days where we decided to travel a few kilometers to El Pantano, a space located on Delta Island in the Río de la Plata.

The objective of this micro-residency will be introspection, self-observation, spaces of silence and complementary activities to monitor projects and explore the personal processes together with the group of residents and the team of managers, artists and curators that make up the proposal.

Each day a specific dynamic will be proposed that includes a few hours of silence, Chi Kung practices every morning, free spaces to swim or paddle in the river, creative writing exercises, relationship with the territory and project follow-up meetings to give them fluidity.

A Isla seeks to pause our daily overstimulated life to close cycles and start new ones.
